- Venue: Class room

- Faculty in charge of the course: Faculty of International Economics and Business,

University of Economics and Business, Vietnam Naitonal University - Hanoi.

3. Course objectives:

The course is suitable for those seeking career opportunities in the fields of trade policy consultancy, export, import and international project expertise. As such, the course aims are to build up student's understanding of relevant theory, key concepts and their applications to critically review and analyze leading contemporary international trade policy issues.

Instructor(s) will use the 4 scales to assess the level of proficiency of the students regarding to their skills achievement of the expected learning outcomes thorough the course (Appendix 1). Levels of cognitive proficiency are assessed with reference to Bloom's Taxonomy.

In detail, the course aims to equip students with the following:

3.1. International trade knowledge and reasoning

Upon the completion of this course, students are expected to be able to achieve the following attitudes at the levels of proficiency between 2 (to be able to understand and apply) 3 (to be able to analyze and evaluate):

- Demonstrate an in-depth knowledge of the trade theories, ranging from classical to modern theories, to explain trade flows and the gains from trade.
- Provide a thorough view and analysis of the different types of instruments of trade policy, and their distributional and welfare implications.
- Demonstrate an understanding and evaluation about the role of trade in the economic development; and the ability to apply relevant concepts and analytical tools to interpret major international trade and policy events and evaluate their implications.
- Describe and understand the political economy of international trade policy and the practices of trade policies in both developed and developing countries.
- Evaluate the role of ASEAN and the WTO in international trade and contemporary trade issues that ASEAN and the WTO members are pursuing to address. Also, the students are required to understand and analyze the Vietnam's integration into these organizations.

3.2. Personal and professional skills and attributes

Students are required to build up personal and professional skills during and after the course between the levels of proficiency 2 (to be able to understand and apply) and 3 (to be able to analyze and evaluate). Specifically, successfully completing this course will contribute to the recognition of students' attainment of the following graduate attributes:

- Reasoning and solving international trade issues: this includes identifying, framing and generalizing international trade issues; analyzing the current trade policy issues/problems qualitatively and with uncertainty; and solving the problems by recommending and giving solutions.
- Researching and discovering international trade knowledge through surveying both print and electronic literature; searching, collecting, analyzing and handling/processing the international trade data.
- Thinking systematically: thinking holistically and critically; and finding international trade problems/issues and their interactions.
- Students are encouraged to develop personal skills and attitudes such as perseverance, responsibility, flexibility, self-confidence, diligence, enthusiasm and passion for career, creative and critical thinking, self-esteem, awareness of one's personal knowledge-skills-and-attitudes, time and resource management, learning and self- learning, self-management and a fluent use of Microsoft Word (in submitting homework and projects) and Microsoft PowerPoint (in the form of case study and project presentation).
- Students fostered and developed professional skills and attitudes including professional ethics; task organization and arrangement; awareness & catch up with modern world's economy; ability to work independently; self-confidence in international working environment; and ability to develop and promote personal & career.

3.3. Interpersonal skills

Students are required to build up interpersonal skills between the levels of proficiency 2 (to be able to understand and apply) and 3 (to be able to analyze and evaluate) to prepare themselves for learning and working in a modern team-based environment.

- The willingness to work in team, and to consider and embrace various viewpoints.
- The ability to interact effectively with others in order to work towards a common outcome in group discussions and presentation.
- The ability to communicate in English.
- The ability to make efficient oral presentation, including preparing presentation and supporting media with appropriate language, style, timing and nonverbal communications.

- The ability to write international trade report in English.

3.4. Ability to apply international trade knowledge into practice:

The students are required to build up their ability to apply the international trade knowledge into practice with the proficiency between 1(to be able to recall) and 2 (to be able to understand and apply). This ability will be incorporated into case studies, group presentation, group discussion and assignments, through which students are able to conceive international trade ideas; and design, implement and evaluate international trade policies/plan/project within the contemporary societal and external context, as well as enterprise and business context.

4. Course overview:

The course provides students with the basic theories and practices related to the field of international trade. The nature, characteristics and tendency of international trade activities are analyzed in the course. The course also covers a range of trade theories to analyze why countries engage in international trade. Apart from this, the course considers various trade policy instruments, the consequences of such instruments and the appropriateness of using trade policies for national objectives, along with the relationship between trade policy and political economy; developing countries' issues; and growth.

The course also analyzes ASEAN's and the WTO's key trade - related agreements and issues; and investigates the contemporary multilateral trade negotiations and Vietnam's integration into the AFTA and WTO. In the course, a variety of real world examples, exercises and case studies from both developed and developing countries are used for students to implement discussion, critically thinking and solving of international trade issues within the context of the appropriate theories.

Interpersonal skills: Students are required to build up interpersonal skills between the levels of proficiency 2 (to be able to understand and apply) and 3 (to be able to analyze and evaluate) to prepare themselves for learning and working in a modern team-based environment.

- The willingness to work in team, and to consider and embrace various viewpoints.
- The ability to interact effectively with others in order to work towards a common outcome in group discussions and presentation.
- The ability to communicate in English.
- The ability to make efficient oral presentation, including preparing presentation and supporting media with appropriate language, style, timing and nonverbal communications.
- The ability to write international trade report in English.

Ability to apply international trade knowledge into practice: The students are required to build up their ability to apply the international trade knowledge into practice with the proficiency between 1(to be able to recall) and 2 (to be able to understand and apply). This ability will be incorporated into case studies, group presentation, group discussion and assignments, through which students are able to conceive international trade ideas; and design, implement and evaluate international trade policies/plan/project within the contemporary societal and external context, as well as enterprise and business context.

7. Course overview:

The course provides students with the basic theories and practices related to the field of international trade. The nature, characteristics and tendency of international trade activities are analyzed in the course. The course also covers a range of trade theories to analyze why countries engage in international trade. Apart from this, the course considers various trade policy instruments, the consequences of such instruments and the appropriateness of using trade policies for national objectives, along with the relationship between trade policy and political economy; developing countries' issues; and growth.

The course also analyzes ASEAN's and the WTO's key trade - related agreements and issues; and investigates the contemporary multilateral trade negotiations and Vietnam's integration into the AFTA and WTO. In the course, a variety of real world examples, exercises and case studies from both developed and developing countries are used for students to implement discussion, critically thinking and solving of international trade issues within the context of the appropriate theories.
